Summary

You know how you notice something once and then you see it everywhere for a while after?

The spy kids see the trees, but where's the forest?

Flora leaned up against a decorative pillar, her parents chatting up a Dr. Someone of Something just a half step in front of her. Her mom had already scolded her once for being too interested in her phone at formal events. She's usually pretty good at faking it, but tonight she tired.

She hadn't wanted to come along. Her father, though wants to be seen as a family man. Whatever.

Her phone buzzes again so she chances a glance up at her parents just to be sure they're not watching. She's going to check it either way, but still.
